Schools Have Large Enrollment Some Changes Made in Faculty Many Local Students Attend

All Buildings Occupied School Plans Extensive

With one of the largest combined enrollments on record The Northfield Schools opened their doors on Tuesday to 1109 young men and women. Mount Hermon School with 566 boys began its 56th year and Northfield Seminary with 543 girls began its 58th year since the founding of the institutions by Dwight L. Moody. Many were turned away at both schools for lack of room.

On Wednesday intelligence tests for both old and new students were held in the Auditorium and on Thursday all classes met for recitations. Miss Mira B. Wilson, principal of Northfield Seminary, will give a reception Saturday afternoon at 3:30 to the new girls at her home on the campus.

Seven new teachers have been assigned to positions on the Seminary faculty. They are as follows: Miss Mary C. Field, a member of the class of '91 and formerly director of the Chelsea Club in New York, will be the new hostess at the Faculty Club House. Miss Doris E. Hopkins, an alumna of Northfield Seminary and a member of its Alumnae Council, is the associate alumnae secretary. Miss Hopkins is a graduate of Cornell University and since 1932 has been in charge of the rural work of the Y. W. C. A. for the State of New Hampshire. She is a niece of Miss Caroline Phelps, house instructor at Gould Hall.

Miss Eleanor M. Knowles of the Girls' High School in Trowbridge, Wiltshire England, is an exchange teacher with Miss Eleanor Davis of the History department. Miss Knowles is a graduate of Cambridge University. Miss Madonna McKinley joins the Physical Education department. A Northfield Seminary alumna, Miss Margaret I. Robinson, will teach in the French department. She received a B.A. degree from Wellesley College and an M.A. from Smith College. A graduate of Hood College, Miss Lucile E. Ritchie, will be assistant at South Hall and the Bookstore. Miss Lucy W. Titcomb who holds degrees from Smith College and Harvard and who has taught at Kobe College, Japan, will teach in the English department.

During the school year Miss Marian Keller, head of the music department and organist at the Seminary, will have leave of absence for the first half year and will study at the Westminster Choir School in Princeton, N. J. Miss Louise Arnett of the English department will study for a year at Harvard, and Miss Jeannette G. Daholl, assistant principal, will travel abroad during the winter term.

Several members of the faculty studied at summer school this year. Among these were Miss Miriam I. Barber of the French department, at Middlebury; Miss Victoria Freeman, English, at Pendle Hill, Penn.; Miss Doris Gilson and Miss Dorothy Johnson, Science, at Cornell; Miss Florence Lyon, Director of Admissions, at Bread Loaf, Vt.; Miss Margaret Mensel, History, at Harvard; and Miss Helen Wright, Mathematics, at Smith Alumnae College.

Among the many new girls who entered Northfield Tuesday were several who come from faraway lands. Dorothea Smith comes from Nanking, China, reaching America by way of England. From across the waters in Kyoto, Japan, Thora Johnson, a graduate in the class of 1918, sends Kishun Kin, one of her pupils in St. Agnes' school. Ted Weber, a graduate of Mt. Hermon in last year's class, has a sister, Myrtle, who arrives at Northfield via California from Hyderabad, Dekkan, India. Lydia Anne Sward, daughter of Major and Mrs. Frank Sward, has arrived here from Port of San Juan, Porto Rico. From this country in Jackson, Missouri, comes Ruth Redmond, and from Ancon, Canal Zone near Panama, Elaine G. Lindo.

The entertainment committee will open in the Auditorium on September 26 with a program by the Chamber orchestra of Boston, a group of musicians from the Boston Symphony orchestra somewhat larger in number than the group which performed last year. Mt. Hermon students and other schools in the vicinity will attend this concert. The director is Nicolas Slonimsky. Carl Sandburg, "poet, lecturer, troubadour" will speak in Silverthorne Hall on October 24. He comes to Northfield for the first time on the Seminary entertainment course.

YE OULDE HUNTS INN

Famous in its day as a place of learning, at times used as a tavern, the scene of many large official town and church events. Now owned and operated as a "Wayside Inn" by Rev. and Mrs. George A. Bronson who were host and hostess to the Historical Society last Monday evening.

Mr. Parsons Speaks To Historical Society At Ould Hunts Inn

The first quarterly meeting of the Northfield Historical Society was held at Ye Ould Hunts Inn on Monday evening and a most successful affair it proved to be. Previous to the meeting Rev. and Mrs. George A. Bronson were hosts to the members at a dinner party in the dining room of the Inn and a splendid and bounteous supper was provided.

President Miss Daisy Holton called the meeting to order in the old ballroom of the building on the fourth floor and here with the memories of by-gone days reminiscences were offered by Hon. Herbert C. Parsons in a most fascinating way. Mr. Parsons related briefly the story of the building and its relation to the history of Northfield. Here schools of learning flourished and from it have gone out many men and women of renown. Here Dwight L. Moody studied and learned his three R's. The room is now most invitingly redecorated and with its cozy seating accommodations its draperies and large chandeliers affords a most interesting place to visit. Mrs. L. B. Smith and Mrs. C. C. Stockbridge who attended the meeting and were students of the school of "useful knowledge" related from memory some of their early experiences. It was also noted that Mr. Parsons and Mr. C. Stearns received their early education within its walls.

It was a notable meeting teeming with interest and devoted to the sanctity of all historical matters. Mr. Fitt in a few well chosen words presented the Centenary of Moody's birth and expressed the wish that some permanent historical memorial may be provided in the town in his memory. It was indeed a well attended meeting and one of the most successful ever held. Hope was expressed by many that some day the Historical Society may be provided with permanent quarters and with a fire-proof building to house many of the antiquities of the town.

Grateful appreciation of the hospitality of the host and hostess and to the speaker of the evening were voted.

They began their visit of twenty-five cities in the country last Sunday at Albany, N. Y. and will end the tour in behalf of missions in December in New York. Mr. and Mrs. Sibley were among the group sent to the Orient a few years ago to investigate Protestant foreign missions by a committee which was financed largely by John D. Rockefeller, Jr. On her return Mrs. Sibley added in writing the official report published in a book entitled "Rethinking Missions."

Press Contributor Passes In Death

Arthur Henry Goodenough, 64, of West Brattleboro, widely known poet whose poems have appeared at various times in the columns of the Press, died at his home last Sunday afternoon. He had been in failing health for some time. Mr. Goodenough inherited a poetic instinct from his mother, who was a lover of poetry, and he began writing verses in his boyhood. His first published poem appeared in the New York Graphic when he was 14 years old, and since then he had written many hundreds of them. At his farm work, in the hay field, while sawing wood and at various other times ideas for poems came to him, and frequently he arose from his bed at night to put ideas into verse.

That Mr. Goodenough's work possessed considerable merit is attested by the fact that he received commendation for it either in person or by letter from Edwin Markham, Rudyard Kipling, Joaquin Miller, Edmund Vance Cheney, Calvin Coolidge, Larkin Mead, Joseph Dana Miller, Daniel S. Cady and many others. In his early life he published a small paper which he called The Sieve.

Many readers of the Press have expressed their appreciation of his poems and only recently a subscriber stated that she had made a collection of them.

Born in Brattleboro, Nov. 11, 1871, Mr. Goodenough was the only son of Henry F. and Elizabeth (Wilson) Goodenough. On November 27, 1902, he married Blanche Alice Cheney of Jacksonville, who died May 16, 1935. He leaves a son, Rupert Frazier Goodenough.

Mr. Goodenough had always lived at West Brattleboro and his funeral was held Tuesday afternoon with burial in West Brattleboro cemetery. He was a member of the Baptist church.

Sears, Roebuck Payroll Is Increasing

Reflection of an increase in employment throughout the nation is seen in a report prepared by the personnel division of Sears, Roebuck & Co. in connection with that concern's 50th anniversary which will be celebrated at the Sears store in this city from Sept. 17 to Oct. 3.

The report which was received today by Fred A. Tuck, manager of the local Sears store, shows that this company's payroll in the state of Massachusetts increases 5 per cent during last year and totalled $1,972,750.

"The fact that Massachusetts is but one of 40 states in which Sears payroll expenditures increased during 1935 is just one of many indications that the nation is rapidly regaining its economic health," said Mr. Tuck.

Further cheering news to the effect that for Sears' 15-day anniversary event several thousand additional employees have been added to the company's present retail staff of 20,000, was included in the report.

Mr. Tuck stated that ever since going into the retail field it has been Sears' policy to hire local people to work in its stores. "We believe that this is a good policy because it is in harmony with our desire to do everything possible toward the economic and social betterment of any community in which a Sears store is located. This desire is apparent also in the company's effort to stock its retail stores with merchandise purchased from manufacturing sources within the community." For the six year period from 1930 through 1935, Sears payroll expenditures in this state totalled $10,966,839.

Playground Committee And History Voted

Both the State primary and the special town meeting was held in the town hall last Tuesday. The polls were opened at 12:00 o'clock and closed at 8:00 o'clock with 264 Republican ballots and 20 Democratic ballots being cast. The special town meeting was called to order by Moderator Walker at 7:30 o'clock with about 150 voters present. The articles of the warrant having to do with the transfer of funds to cover costs on bridge account, constables' pay for guard-service for road machinery account, for snow removal and for old age assistance, were quickly passed and disposed of.

The committee on the Town History reported and requested an appropriation of $2,500 to start the printing of the book which had been prepared by Mr. Herbert C. Parsons. The appropriation was voted and Mr. Parsons who was present received a grateful appreciation in behalf of the town by Prof. F. L. Duley in a well-worded address.

Mr. Parsons also addressed the meeting and stated that the preparation of the manuscript had been most fascinating and interesting. The Committee of the D. L. Moody Centenary reported and asked that February 5, 1937 be made a town holiday which was voted and the committee ordered continued.

The article calling for a Committee to supervise the new playground was passed, said committee to consist of a member of the Selectmen, a member of the School Committee and a member of the Athletic Association. The committee will endeavor to unravel the situation in which the town finds itself in relation to the playground so that its proper use for all athletic events may be aided.

HELP SAVE YOUR CHILD'S EYES WITH THESE NEW I.E.S. LAMPS

Not many months ago one of the country's foremost illuminating engineers visited his daughter at college. He found her studying under a light so glaring that her eyes were strained and she was suffering from severe headaches. Then and there, he decided to devote himself to developing a better study lamp.

WHAT IS THE I. E. S. LAMP?

The result was a very simple invention—the I. E. S. lamp. It was simple—but based upon an entirely new principle of lighting. Instead of the rays from the light bulb being focused directly upon the book in a spotlight fashion, the new I. E. S. light was designed to make use of the principle of indirect lighting. It looks very similar to the ordinary table lamp, but inside the shade is a frosted bowl that softens the light that comes through directly to the reader and also throws part of the rays upward to be reflected from the ceiling and the walls.

If you have ever read a newspaper beside one of these new style I. E. S. lamps, you will have noticed the difference immediately.

THE LOW COST OF GOOD LIGHTING

There is an idea in the minds of a good many people that lighting by electricity is expensive. This may have been so in the early days of the incandescent light, but it is certainly not true today. For example, in an all-electric home that earns a low rate you can burn a 100-watt bulb for three hours for less than one cent. This is indeed a small price to pay for good lighting that makes reading, sewing and other evening occupations a real pleasure.

EDITORIAL

During the depression, almost 15 per cent of the population lived in whole or part on money paid out by insurance companies in fulfillment of contracts. No one knows how much dire want was prevented by that money — how many children educated who could not have been otherwise — how many businesses saved from bankruptcy — how many homes saved from mortgage foreclosure. But everyone knows that insurance payments were of inestimable value in helping us carry through the dark years. That fact is a testimonial to both the wisdom of the millions of citizens who purchased insurance, and to the amazing record of solvency and service made by the companies.

If there should be a Republican sweep this year, resulting in the election of Governor Landon and a GOP majority in the House, the party's legislative problems would be far from simple. Reason: It's mathematically impossible for the Republicans to control the next Senate. Thirty-four senators are up for re-election — and if the Republicans win every contested seat, the Democrats will still have a majority of two. And thirteen of the contests are in the South, where the Democratic primary nomination is tantamount to election.

Railroad officials of the New England roads tell us that railroad travel has been the best for seven years this past summer. The reduced fares now offered to the public are proving that it was no mistake and persons who are traveling long distances will find that it will be more economical than using one's own motor. With the increased use of our highways making for traffic congestion and the difficulty of parking in the cities it will be not only cheaper but wiser to use the railroads.

The present political campaign has been fairly free from mudslinging and it is hoped that it will continue. Mudslinging does no good and no campaign was ever won by such tactics. Better by far to be strong partisans and argue the merits or demerits of each party's plans and effort. Candidates should, however, be able to stand a most searching inquisition of their past careers.

Pigs Can't Vote

(Pulaski Enterprise, Mound City, Ill.)

An old darkey is said to have made the following wise crack after listening to a tall story: "You know I can't read and I can't write and all I know is what folks tell me, and if they don't tell me what's so I don't know anything." A good many people only know what is going on from reading the newspapers. Well, if they read enough, they know a great deal. Reading the news as it appears in the papers gives one a liberal education in many ways.

Take the condition of the country for instance, and who is not interested in knowing about that? Its political and financial problems of late are of interest to most of us. Well, what do we really know about it from what we read in the papers? In 1932 we read the Democratic platform. That suited most of us. We read that it suited Mr. Roosevelt and he was elected to carry it out and said he would. That is what we knew, because we read it in the papers.

Next, we read there was to be a war on the depression and it was to be banished forthwith. Well, has anybody heard of any victory over the depression? There were many generals appointed (who never commanded anything before), many aides (who never aided anyone before), to direct the large army which was assembled, but they do not seem to have met the enemy. They were always putting the saddle on the wrong horse and getting thrown off. It would seem they couldn't win a dog fight even if they owned both dogs. They have partially succeeded by various tactics in taking farming, business, and banking under their control, but what that has to do with licking the depression we have not found out. Their army strategy seems to be centered in trying to find the depression; if found, they might drag it before a Senate Committee and, when thus cornered and surrounded by the Army, make faces at it and call it names.

Well, so far nothing we have read about has happened. President Roosevelt did not carry out the platform. Everything has been different from what we read it was going to be. Debts and taxes are rising like dust clouds; the unemployed are still unemployed, except those in the Washington army. Now do we know what we have read about the State of the Nation, or are we in the same position that the colored man was, even if we can read and write?

We read more. We read that the President is laughing and having a fine time. Well, maybe there is a joke somewhere, the President is enjoying the proceedings so much. At least, he is having a fine time, so much so that his reception room rings with hearty laughter. It may be like the American joke the Englishman did not quite grasp. He heard that a man by the name of Strange had bought a lot in the cemetery and put up a large monument without anything on the monument. When his friends asked if he did not intend to have his name engraved on it and a proper epitaph, he said, "Certainly not; I do not want anything on it, because when people go by and see nothing on it they will say, 'That's Strange!'" The Englishman undertook to tell the story, but forgot the man's name and said that the man put up a monument without anything on it so that when people went by and looked at it they would say, "Isn't that funny!"

It would be strange if the President did not get some fun out of the whole performance, but we just don't see how he gets so much, with the serious prospects confronting the country — increased unemployment, increased taxes, unrest and uncertainty growing — everything different from what we expected when he was elected.

Of course, it is not his fault if he does not know how to straighten everything out the way it should be. It is the fault of congress. There is where the brains of the country are located, and perhaps being able to get this wise government body to let him try anything is where the fun comes in. If what he does works, he gets the credit; if it does not, congress takes the blame, as far as he is concerned. The people ought to elect a new congress if the present one does not represent them, but congress is too smart to let them do it. Congress does know how to get re-elected, and that is not strange. They let the President have enough of our money to spend so he can be re-elected and they expect to ride along with him. They say our money was spent to make jobs for the unemployed and provide for those on relief, but the number grew faster than the money was spent, so the more unemployed, the more money to spend, the more on relief. This sound like the old Iowa adage, "We will raise more corn to feed more pigs so we will have to raise more corn." However, pigs can't vote, so it is all right to kill the pig; but the unemployed and those on relief can vote, so why worry if the number increases? Now is that strange, or is it just funny?

We read that our farmers are being encouraged to raise less, but at the same time millions in food-stuffs, such as corn, oats, wheat, butter, meat products, wool, etc., are being imported. This may be one reason why our farmers have not been getting a satisfactory price for what they raise. Unless something is done about this, the less our farmers raise, the less, perhaps, they will get for what they do raise. Now does this make sense, or is it just one more blunder?

We read that this money the government is spending was secured largely from the banks, who used our bank deposits to buy bonds from the government. If it is ever paid back, we will have to furnish the government with the money to do it by way of taxes; so we will be taxed to pay off a large part of the government debt to get our own money back from the banks. Of course, the government might print some money and pay the banks that way, but what would such money be worth?

No doubt some of us need help. With so many people in the country, there will always be some of us needing help, perhaps more now than ever. However, there must be a screw loose somewhere, because it does not seem reasonable to have to take a four years' course under college professors and brain trusters and still not arrive at any reasonable or practical way of solving our problems.

Do you remember when you were window shopping and did not know just what you wanted or whether it would be what you wanted if you did get it? You remember seeing a sign on a hook in the window reading, "Smile, damn you." You laughed, didn't you? Then you went in and bought what you did not want. Well, it seems to us that reading political news in the papers from now on will be like looking in shop windows. We will be told whom to vote for and if we can be kept laughing and believing all the President says he is going to do if he is re-elected, and forget about what he said he was going to do before he was elected last time, we may be tempted to vote for him again. Perhaps, when reading what he is going to do, we won't need another education. Perhaps when we go to shop this fall we will look more carefully. We may not want to laugh. Experience is a great teacher.

Perhaps, as this is considered the richest and most resourceful country on the face of the earth and we are looked up to as such, we should have somebody as president with an aristocratic family that is outstanding and very popular, and having sufficient finances of his own to maintain city and country homes — in other words, somebody who can put up a front, look grand, and talk. Perhaps — but why read more? Now that we are being given the opportunity again to pick out something in the window, shouldn't we pick out something that is serviceable and that we can afford to buy?

And it's a good idea to be making some slips or cuttings of geraniums, begonias, and so on. I get a small box, fill it with clean fine sand, keep it moist, and I never have any trouble getting enough plants to pot for the house.

In case you get caught on a visit with Mr. Frost, I have heard

The Back Yard Gardener

Well, folks, the weather man reports that Jack Frost has left his summer home and it behooves us back yard gardeners to be ready for an unexpected visit.

Of course, Jack Frost's visits will vary considerably for different parts of the state. I saw an item in the paper the other day that says that the first frosts up Greenfield way come most any time now, while down Boston or Provincetown way they don't come until the middle of October or sometimes even later.

Nothing looks worse to me than a frost-bitten plant and, if anything I can do will help keep beautiful flowers coming for another two, three, or four weeks longer, I'm certainly glad to do it.

I find the best way is to sew together a number of old burlap bags which have been ripped open. Then I take some of the ordinary painted green sticks which I use to support my plants. If course I have the sticks a little bit higher than the plants I'm going to cover, and I throw the burlap bags over these sticks. Then even when the bags are wet from dew they won't break the plants.

I am using the same idea to protect my few tomato plants because there are plenty of green tomatoes still on the vines.

Some people use paper, but that is so hard to keep in place. Others use cardboard boxes which they get from the grocery store.

And don't forget that you had better be getting busy if you have any house plants which you want to move indoors. Gardenias, oleanders, etc., had better be potted mighty soon, and then gradually adjusted to growing indoors.

And it's a good idea to be making some slips or cuttings of geraniums, begonias, and so on. I get a small box, fill it with clean fine sand, keep it moist, and I never have any trouble getting enough plants to pot for the house.

In case you get caught on a visit with Mr. Frost, I have heard

THE FELLER ME MUDDER TINKS I AM

Whilist walking down a crowded city street the other day, I heard a little urchin to a comrade turn and say: "Hi, Chimmie, lemme tell youse, I'd be happy as a clam, If I only was the feller dat me mudder t'inks I am."

She t'inks I am a wonder, and she knows her little lad Could never ix wilm' nuttin' dat was ugly, ean or bad, Oh, lots of times I sit and t'ink how nice 'twould be, gee whiz, If a feller was de feller dat his mudder t'inks he is."

My friends, be yours a life of toil or undiluted joy.

You can learn a wholesome lesson from that small untutored boy, Don't aim to be an early saint, with eyes fixed on a star; Just try to be the fellow that your mother thinks you are.

—Will S. Adkin

that sprinkling the plants gently early in the morning with cold water before the sun's rays strike them will help prevent the leaves from turning black—that is provided the leaves are not too badly bitten.

And another word of warning. If you have any hardy chrysanthemums, they'll stand quite a bit of frost but the new buds are rather tender, so it's a mighty good idea to keep them covered at night.
